EDWARD GINSBERG CENTER
CONNECTING STUDENTS & EDUCATORS WITH U-M
The Center for Educational Outreach (CEO) supports and advances the University of Michigan's commitment to educational outreach and academic excellence. CEO partners with faculty, staff, and students to develop and implement programs that inform, engage, and inspire a diverse community of scholars. We strive to increase access and success in higher education.

- Providing tailored campus visits to underserved K-12 schools or community-based organizations
- Serving as the University of Michigan’s hub for youth opportunities, including need-based scholarships
- Connecting university resources to underserved schools and state-wide organizations
- Supporting college-going culture with schools, students, and education professionals
- Informing, engaging, and inspiring a diverse group of scholars across disciplines

The University of Michigan School of Education is a top-ranked, public school of education devoted to developing civically engaged children, youth, and adults for a diverse and inclusive society. The school's mission is to generate, study, and teach strategies, practices, and tools for addressing educational problems and to prepare practitioners, policy-makers, and researchers who can develop equitable and just educational opportunities.

- Research and resource development around teaching and learning, instructional and curriculum design, leadership, education policy, and educational equity
- Teacher and administrator education, both pre-service and in-service
- Public scholarship and community engagement around educational issues and questions
- School - University partnerships, including the Mitchell - Scarlet - Huron Teaching and Learning Collaborative in Ann Arbor; the Detroit School of the Arts; and the new UM - DPSCD P-20 Partnership
- Curriculum development, education consulting, and program evaluation through the Center for Education Design, Evaluation, and Research (CEDER)

As a community engagement center, the Ginsberg Center cultivates and stewards equitable partnerships between communities and U-M in order to advance social change for the public good. Understanding that schools are a key pillar of a thriving community, we work to create and support community-university partnerships that serve the schools and the communities in which they reside.

- Matching schools and other community partners with faculty, courses, student organizations and other university resources to support specific organizational priorities and needs
- Stewarding partnerships with schools and community organizations
- Providing consultation to U-M faculty on engaged teaching and research
- Advising student organizations on community engagement
- Supporting literacy initiatives, including the America Reads tutoring program
